DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

1. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by HU 61443.

The abstract teaches detoxification mold and micro toxin decontamination by combining grain fodder with hydrogen peroxide.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-23 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Austin (US Patent 137743) in view of Chen (US Patent 5641530), Dalmasso et al. (US Patent 5460845) and HU 61443.

Art Unit: 1761

Austin teaches spraying as a mist, grains that are used as feed with a disinfectant to remove fungus spores. The reference does not teach that the disinfectant is hydrogen peroxide or its amounts.

Chen (US Patent 5641530) teaches disinfecting food stuff using hydrogen peroxide. At col. 4, lines 4-5, Chen states that the "germicide effect of hydrogen peroxide has been well recognized". Concentrations are shown at col. 2, lines 30-35.

Dalmasso et al. (US Patent 5460845) teach a method decontaminating seeds, grains, etc. of molds, yeast and fungi by using hydrogen peroxide. (col. 1, lines 15-20 and lines 65-67). The patent teaches that the liquid hydrogen peroxide concentration is 25-70%. Although the patent teaches the use of H_2O_2 as a vapor, one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made, would reasonably expect that since a compound and its properties are inseparable, the germicidal property of H_2O_2 would be the same, liquid or vapor. Furthermore, the prior art applied recognizes that liquid peroxide is disinfectant for feedstuff with respect to fungus etc. It would have been obvious to the artisan that the applied references, as a whole, teach that hydrogen peroxide is disinfectant for feedstuff, grains, etc., that it was known to spray a mist of the disinfectant over feedstuff and the concentrations shown between 20-70% by '845 would depend on the amount of grain to be disinfected and the extent of contamination expected because of the quality and length of storage. Note that HU 61443 already establishes that it was known in the art that grain fodder contaminated with mold or microtoxins can be detoxified by hydrogen peroxide and the availability of such art and knowledge would have been available to the practitioner who is looking to preserve grains, even distiller's grains from mold and/or fungus.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
